The opinion is in some quar-ters gaining ground that the looking up in the Treasury of so large an amount of currency will make a severe but temporary stringency in the loan market. But it is forgotten that there have been very large issues of 6 per cent. compound interest notes during the last sixty days which have swelled the volume of the circulation, and that in consequence the prevailing tendency is towards an accumulation of currency in the great financial centres. THE TRUE TEST.—Gail Hamilton writes to her fair sisterhood: We often have seen in the columns of religious newspapers sketches of eminent Christians. I read one lately, of a farmer's wife, who used to delight in prayer meetings, celebrated her children's birthdays by prayer, and spent whole days in praying. All these are favorable signs; but before I pronounced her an eminent Christian, I should like to know whether, previous to her withdrawal from the family circle to pray all day, she made any provision for the extra labor that her absence would devolve on others or whether Bridget had to skim the milk and wash the pans, besides cooking, sweeping and dusting, or whether the next day went smoothly. I should like to know whether, when a little restless chubby hand upset the gravy boat on the clean table-cloth, she bound herself over to keep the peace; whether in her house cleanliness was made subservient to comfort, or comfort to cleanliness; whether she had ever laid down her sewing and took into her arms the half-sick and wholy cross, fretful and miserable four-year-old boy, to charm away his unhappiness with a fairy story, or anykind of story, or song, or simple talk; whether she gave her heretical neighbor credit for as much candor, sincerity, truthfulness, earnestness ard unselfisnness in his religion as he developed and she recognized in his character of citizen, neighbor and father; whether the delicious green-pea soup that she sent to the sick woman next door was the result of an extra amount made for the purpose, or whether her poor girl dined, per force, that day off cold boiled pork and potatoes; whether she was generally ready to step into the wagon when it came to the door on Sunday morning, or whether she provoked her husband to wrath by keeping them all waiting. The San Francisco papers stoutly maintain that: "Ist. Gen.
